

We wanted to highlight some valuable educational content developed by the National Centre for Immunisation Research and Surveillance (NCIRS) that we felt would be beneficial for Staff Health Coordinators working with First Nations healthcare workers.

- resource for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities – to support decision making around influenza vaccination, and
- resources for mainstream and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander immunisation providers to support vaccination conversations with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people (with focus on influenza vaccination)

Please see the next page for further information and links.

Resource for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities

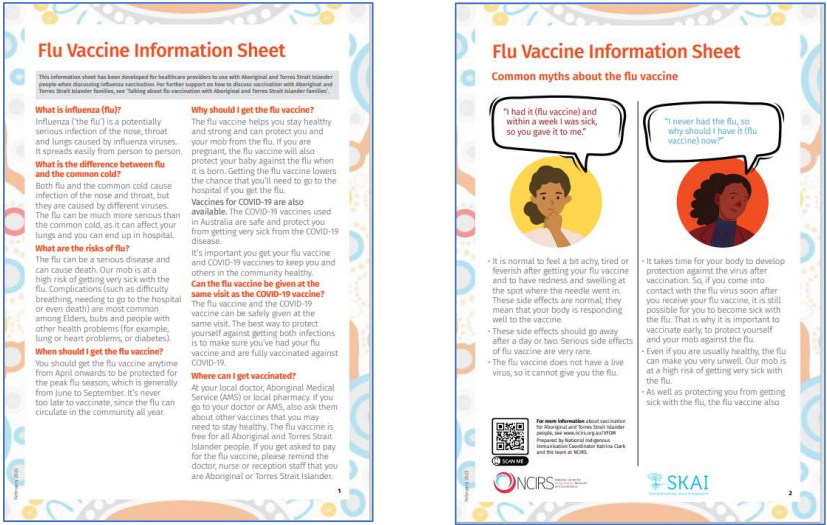

Supporting conversations about vaccinations with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people

The purpose of this page is to provide you with information and resources that help you to have supportive culturally appropriate vaccination conversations with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander families. While we focus here on influenza vaccination, the principles can be applied to other vaccinations.

<https://ncirs.org.au/supporting-conversations-about-vaccinations-Aboriginal-and-Torres-Strait-Islander-people>

Resources for immunisation providers

The NCIRS 'Flu Vaccine Information Sheet' for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people resource answers the questions that are being asked most frequently by people in the community.

<https://ncirs.org.au/public/influenza-vaccination-information-aboriginal-and-torres-strait-islander-people>